"Black Lives Matter" & Other So Called Black Leader Show No Respect

Although "Black Lives Matter" make no qualms about their contempt for the police and America, they should be equally as outraged about Dorn's murder as they are about the death of George Floyd.

After all, it only makes sense that the phrase "Black Lives Matter" would apply to all African-Americans, including Dorn.

While the police have become a target of left-wing outrage following the death of George Floyd late last month, a scene from St. Louis earlier this week made it clear that a large number of Americans still respect the men and women in blue.

On Tuesday, hundreds of people waited in a long line outside Hopewell Missionary Baptist Church to pay their respects to David Dorn, the retired St. Louis Metropolitan Police Department Captain who lost his life June 2 while trying to defend a pawn shop from looters.

Dorn, an African-American who spent 38 years on the force, saw the importance of keeping his community safe, even after he retired from the police department.

For this reason, the 77-year-old provided security for a pawn shop, "periodically checking on the shop whenever an alarm sounded," according to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Black Lives Matter, the Peaceful Protest, Riots, Looting and the Murdering of innocent law abiding American citizens like David Dorn, and so many others including George Floyd have nothing to do with "Black Lives or Social Justice."

The truth is that it's about the "Transformation of American" to a Socialist Country and as such becomes a One-World-Order Nation proposed by the Socialist Democrats.

EDITORS NOTE: Ernie C. Salgado Jr

Lee's Pawn and Jewelry found itself in the line of fire as protests in the wake of Floyd's death spiraled out of control. A looter allegedly shot and killed Dorn as the retired police captain tried to protect the store from those who sought to burglarize it. St. Louis police have arrested 24-year-old Stephan Cannon, who was allegedly part of a group of looters seen on surveillance video stealing televisions from the store, and charged him with Dorn's murder.

Sadly, just about every other looter in St. Louis got to commit their crimes with impunity.

As Missouri Attorney General Eric Schmitt announced the day after Dorn's murder, "our office has learned that every single one of the St. Louis looters and rioters arrested were released back onto the streets by local prosecutor Kim Gardner."

It's not hard to imagine that Dorn, who obviously loved the city of St. Louis, would have been horrified to see the rioters and looters go free.

Fortunately, the impressive turnout at Dorn's public visitation proved that the people of the Gateway to the West loved him right back:

While most of America was preoccupied with memorials to Floyd, and understandably so, Dorn's public visitation and subsequent funeral should have received just as much attention.

Yet the tragic story of Dorn's death has received very little by way of coverage in national establishment media outlets.

According to NewsBusters, on the morning after Dorn's killing, "ABC and CBS only spent seconds on his death while NBC completely ignored the senseless murder."

Dorn's death was one of many tragedies that unfolded as a result of nationwide riots dubbed by the establishment media as "mostly peaceful." In addition to multiple senseless deaths, countless businesses have suffered immense damage.

Although many in the "Black Lives Matter" make no qualms about their contempt for the police, they should be equally as outraged about Dorn's murder as they are about the death of George Floyd.

After all, it only makes sense that the phrase "Black Lives Matter" would include David Dorn. But since he was murdered by a "Peaceful Black Looter" they just ignore him.

The turnout at Dorn's public memorial proves that in spite of all of the rhetoric about "defunding the police" and the hasty cancellation of popular police shows designed to placate the far left, most Americans still respect police officers and their efforts to serve and protect.

In fact, a YouGov poll conducted earlier this week found that 53 percent of Americans said they oppose cutting funding for police departments, while just 25 percent support the idea.

The same poll found that 60 percent of Americans have "some" or a "great deal" of trust in the police.

While George Floyd's funeral may have had all of the big-name celebrities, the turnout for David Dorn's public visitation shows that he had the respect of the people who matter the most - the community he served.

If nothing else, the long lines for Dorn's memorial should restore faith in the profound decency of the American people.

Rest in peace Officer Dorn, you served your Country with dignity and as a man of God. Your contribution to the advancement of mankind shall not go unnoticed.

And God Bless America the land of the Free and Brave.

Tucker Carlson Fox News June 8, 2020 Black Lives Matter Has "Very little to do with black lives"

Contributed by Franklin Motte, Moreno Valley CA
Source: Conservative Institute

The controversy began when Carlson addressed the looting and violence that has been associated with protests over the death of George Floyd and slammed the leftist activists who seek to have fired anyone who questions the movement or its motives.

"We know this," Carlson declared to his audience on June 8, 2020. "No matter what they tell you, it has very little to do with black lives - if only it did."

"If Democratic leaders cared about saving the lives of black people, and they should they wouldn't ignore the murder of thousands of young black men in their cities every year," the Fox host added. "They wouldn't put abortion clinics in black neighborhoods."

Instead, Carlson said, they would "do their very best to improve public schools and to encourage intact families, which we know beyond a shadow of a doubt is central to the life prospects of children."

things, this moment we are living through, but it is definitely not about black lives and remember that when they come for you, and at this rate, they will," he insisted, according to the Daily Caller.

"Anyone who has ever been subjected to the rage of the mob knows the feeling. It's like being swarmed by hornets. You cannot think clearly, and the temptation is to panic, but you cannot panic," Carlson went on to implore, seemingly drawing on his own experience as a recurring target of the left.

Fans show support: As the Daily Caller reported, several companies responded to Carlson's commentary by announcing that they would no longer be advertising during his program, including Disney, Papa John's Pizza, and T-Mobile.

While some Twitter users celebrated the news, others made it clear that they stood behind the Fox News host, with many using the Twitter hashtag #IStandWithTucker.

Others said they would be boycotting the sponsors who dropped him, with one user, who was retweeted by Rep. Matt Gaetz (R-FL), saying that there would be "no more Papa John's for me. Tucker speaks the truth and they fear him," the user added, according to the Daily Caller.

Minneapolis: American Indian Movement (AIM) Protects Neighborhood

Source: Shayne’s Journal #4700, June 11, 2020 * By Jean Hopfensperger, Star Tribune

The Pow Wow Grounds is well known for its wild rice soup and Indian tacos.

But now it is also known as the hub of an impressive community effort that saved Franklin Avenue businesses and nonprofits during the violence that erupted after the death of George Floyd at the hands of Minneapolis police.

It started with three Indian leaders who saw the destruction unfolding on Lake Street and rushed to protect businesses at the heart of the Indian cultural corridor along Franklin Avenue.

Michael Goze, CEO of the American Indian Community Development Corporation, and Frank Paro, president of the American Indian Movement (AIM), sent out a call for volunteers as violence erupted in the streets.

Bob Rice, owner of Pow Wow Grounds coffee shop, opened his property as the staging area for AIM street patrols and offered other logistical support.

Each night, 50 to several hundred community volunteers gathered in the Pow Wow Grounds parking lot for a meal, prayer and assignments from AIM to protect the area.

As the street patrols wound down last weekend, neighbors showed their appreciation. Librarians at the Franklin Library had a mural of the AIM flag painted on its boarded doors.

The Native American Community Clinic had scrawled thank you AIM on its window boards that were coming down.

“This could have been Lake Street, Goze.” said. “Now we can build up rather than rebuild.”

“I’m in awe of what they did,” added Will Delaney, co-chairman of the Franklin Area Business Association. “All of us were dealing with a lot of challenges at that time.” “To pull the patrol together

This week the organizers walked down Franklin, pointing out unharmed buildings and properties with glass windows intact.

Buildings included the Minneapolis American Indian Center, All Nations Indian Church, the Mashkiki Waakaigan Pharmacy, the Woodlands National Bank, the Dollar Store and Maria’s Cafe.

The AIM patrols also were in the Lake Street area, they said, guarding the Division of Indian Work and Migizi Communications, the one building they were not able to save.

The men said they were relieved that the heart of the Twin Cities Indian community was spared and grateful that so many people offered to protect the area.

Rice gestured to a building of connected storefronts, noting that one of these buildings had gone up in fire, we have lost the whole place.

Paro said he was named president of AIM, the national American Indian civil rights group, succeeding Clyde Belencourt just two days before the violence erupted. After hearing about looting and fires, he said he knew that law enforcement would not make Franklin Avenue a priority.

So he resurrected the citizen patrols launched by AIM when it was created in 1968 in this very neighborhood, to document and protect residents from police brutality. The recent patrols included children and grandchildren of that first group.

My wife showed me a map of places in Minneapolis that were looted and burned, Paro said. Around here, there were just two or three dots.

We had a lot of people involved, he added. Men. Women. People from age 16 to the 70s

Last Friday, about 50 people gathered outside Pow Wow Grounds for ribs, donated by Famous Dave restaurant, and grilled walleye. With curfew ending, it would be the last night on the streets.

Lisa Bellanger, executive director of national AIM, sat at a table with a paper grid showing the properties that needed protection.

Volunteers signed up with their names and contact information. They guarded specific buildings but also kept an eye open for trouble..

There were people on the rooftop here, said Goze, gesturing to the Minneapolis American Indian Center. We had walkie-talkies. We used an app on phones. We texted.

Goze said. “Some patrollers who had permits carried guns.” “Their methods weren’t always conventional.” For example. “When they discovered four teenage boys trying to break into a neighborhood liquor store, patrol members apprehended them and called their parents.”

A provision for release was that a parent in their hometown of Eau Claire, Wis., drive to Minneapolis and retrieve the boys.

The nightly send-off for the patrols included a traditional Indian ceremony and traditional medicine for protection on the streets.

“While the group received city permission to patrol early on, there was some confusion after the Minnesota National Guard entered the scene. Just as neighborhood block clubs stood watch past curfews, so did the AIM patrols. This led to a clash with law enforcement at the Little Earth housing complex, when projectiles were fired,” said Bellanger.

But night after night, the volunteers arrived, staying at their posts until 6 a.m.

Aldi store manager Amanda Jerde recalled pulling up to her store to find several vehicles blocking the driveway entrance, protecting her business.

“It is truly amazing what they did,” Jerde said. “I’d come to work at 5:30 or 6 in the morning, and they would be camped out in the parking lot. And I don’t have connections to the community. I just work here.”

Across the street at the Franklin Library, the orange, yellow and black AIM flag is painted on the plywood covering the door, which has been closed since March because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

“We know how much AIM has protected our buildings and our communities,” said librarian Becky Wolf, at a community gathering there last weekend. “The library staff wanted to do something to thank them.”

Alex Buehler, branch manager of Woodlands National Bank, was handling customer requests that day, grateful for a patrol that earlier had stopped two young men who had threatened to torch the bank.

But when the AIM patrols packed up about 6 a.m., others bent on destruction had been watching for a chance to move in. “They broke in about 6:30,” Buehler said. “They trashed the lobby.”

This week, life was getting back to normal. The Pow Wow Grounds parking lot now holds a tent where people can register for free groceries and supplies available next to the coffee shop. Goze had turned his attention back to developing affordable housing in the area.

But given the success of the AIM patrol, Paro said he like to help it continue.

People make a big mistake when they say, 'I need to be motivated.' You motivate yourself. I might inspire somebody, but that person has to be motivated within themselves first. Look inside yourself, believe in yourself, put in the hard work, and your dreams will unfold.

California Assembly Member James Ramos: “Auditor findings reveal lack of inclusion, Oversight in returning Native American remains, artifacts to tribes.”

SACRAMENTO CA—The University of California system has demonstrated inadequate oversight, delays, and lack of inclusion in its repatriation of Native American remains and artifacts to tribes, according to the State Auditor’s findings and recommendations issued this week.

“When committees that deal with Native American remains lack a tribal majority, it causes concerns which need to be addressed,” said Assembly member James C. Ramos (D-Highland).

Ramos, the first California Native American elected to the legislature, has pressed the UC system to return its holding of Native American remains and artifacts. “We need to ensure that these remains are returned to the Native American people for proper reburial. It has been too long. To Native Americans, this process has been much like digging up modern cemeteries and then having educational lectures about the unearthed remains.”

Ramos added that he hopes the auditor’s findings and recommendations will spur

UC to move more quickly and with greater transparency and inclusion to complete the repatriation process. The legislator observed that his bill, AB 275, updates current law regarding key definitions and processes regarding repatriation that are applicable to state museums, and institutions. This would include consideration of tribal knowledge and state cultural affiliation in determining eligible items for return to the tribes. Auditor recommendations also include: Biannual reports from UC campuses on their repatriation progress; Publication of an updated policy from the UC Office of the President by August 2020; Appropriate tribal representation on committees is in place by November 2020 as directed in state law.

Ramos is a Tribal member of the San Manuel Band Mission Indians, So. CA. He proudly represents the 40th Assembly district which includes Highland, Loma Linda, Mentone, Rancho Cucamonga, Redlands, and San Bernardino.

The Psychology of Turkeys

This section is dedicated to the insane actions, decisions and policies made by our would be leaders.

My View By Eric C. Salgado Jr.

This moron is the "Poster Idiot" for how the Country would be managed if we allow the Socialist-Democrats to take control. It's ok to gather in masses of hundreds to "Peacefully Protest" to burn and destroy public & private property, to loot and steal and attack police with bricks, knives & guns. But law abiding Americans are not allowed to work, attend church services, play in a park with their children, visit their aging parents or have a simply BBQ with friends. This is wrong on so many levels, it's time to end it. A Free People don't live this way.

And while all we asked was to protect our drinking water, our people were drenched with water canons in minus 15 degree freezing weather, attacked by vicious trained attack dogs, shot with rubber bullets and others forced to be jailed in dog cages. Many of our people are still in prison for daring to challenge the Congress protected oil companies. All this happened under the Obama administration & Socialist Democrat controlled Senate. So don't spout this "Social Justices" & Black Lives Matter racist unprocessed sewage to us, American Indian people. No one but our own people showed up to support us and we are still disregarded.

Seattle CHAZ Domestic Terrorist' Ask City Fire Department for Help:

Over the past couple of weeks, multiple blocks of the Capitol Hill neighborhood in Seattle have been occupied by "Peaceful Protesters."

These "Peaceful Protestors" and apparently otherwise unskilled people have declared the area as independent from the United States, and they are calling it the "Capitol Hill Autonomous Zone," or CHAZ.

It must be hard going out on your own, because the self-appointed leaders of this autonomous area seemed unprepared to handle a curve ball which was thrown at them this week.

When a dumpster fire struck near the CHAZ border a couple of nights ago the demonstrators were forced to take drastic measures: They apparently had to seek international aide by calling Seattle's fire department.

I guess it might take some time for them to figure out how to govern themselves since most of them have never had to provide for themselves, now that they've apparently obtained their independence and since the pizza business was burned down I guess the City and State will be supplying them with food and water.

And I'm sure mommy and daddy will continue paying for the cell phone service. I was also wondering if they arranged for long term parking for their BMW's and Porsche's while they take over Seattle or are given the City as they exercise their first amendment rights!

House Speaker, Nancy Pelosi (Socialist-Democrat CA) demands the removal of 11 statues of Confederate leaders from Washington D.C., but does not include the statue of the late Senator Robert Bird. Nor does she acknowledge that 9 were Democrats and 2 Independent. Bird was a self proclaimed racist that served as the Grand Wizard of the KKK in Virginia. He also opposed the Civil Rights Act, school integration and Affirmative Action. But he was a Democrat! After 33-years in Congress Pelosi just decided to jump on the Socialist bandwagon.

CALIFORNIA SOCIALIST INSANITY CONTINUES: Reparations Slavery Bill Passes Calif. Assembly by 56-5 Vote

In a stunning 56-5 vote, the California assembly decided to move forward with creating a "task force" to study reparations for the state's black citizens.

California is one step closer to providing African American reparations for slavery. But leaves out the American Indians, Mexicans and Chinese who were also enslaved. The Indian even had a $5 death-bounty on men, women and children.

As an American Indian and a tribal member of a Federally recognized American Indian Tribe in California, I'll pass on this nonsense.

However, since the State legislators are in such a benevolent frame of mind they might want to revisit the unfair income taxation of the American Indian Tribal Members.

Furthermore, who will pay the for this "Political Handout?" Will I and my fellow tribal members be obligated to pay for this political farce?

How about the Mexicans and Chinese? How much will this misguided legislation cost? Will it be all taxpayers, including those who have legally immigrated to the United States? Will it include white people whose ancestors never owned slaves and even fought for their freedom? These are legitimate questions that people are asking!

One would think that California has enough current problems to deal without going down this guilt trip road.

With a 56-5 vote on Thursday, June 11, 2020, the California Assembly advanced a proposal to establish a task force to study and prepare recommendations for how to give reparations to African Americans.

It is a top priority for California's Legislative Black Caucus. Wow, what a revelation. Nothing like buying votes with Tax Payers Money!

UPDATE JUNE 19, 2020: Trump Oklahoma Rally Exceeds 900,000 Ticket Requests; Breaks Record by 10X Plus

Over 900,000 people have officially requested tickets to attend Trump's first MAGA rally in months.

Compare this to Joe Biden, who has been mocked for hiding in his basement. When Biden makes TV appearances on friendly programs, he often makes verbal gaffes and stumbles.

On the campaign trail during the primaries, Biden could hardly fill high school gymnasiums.

Compare this to Trump, who is approaching 1,000,000 ticket requests in a town of 400,000 in a venue that fits 19,000.

Democrats and the media will likely try to scare or shame people for attending the rally.

They will also accuse Trump of being "reckless" for holding the rally. But we are still a free nation!

The people have the right to make their own responsible choices and decisions! And right now... the silent majority is choosing to stand with President Trump and choose freedom over tyranny!

Yet, the main stream media continue to report that Biden is ahead of Trump in the "Polls," whatever that is these days.

Federal Court rules to cancel energy lease on land sacred to Blackfeet

Source: Indian Country Today

HELENA, Montana – The three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit overruled a federal judge's 2018 decision that had allowed a Louisiana company to keep its lease within the Badger Two-Medicine area of Lewis and Clark National Forest.

That area near Glacier National Park is the site of the creation story of the Blackfoot tribes of southern Canada and Montana's Blackfoot Nation.

John Murray, the Blackfeet's tribal historic preservation officer, said the court's decision will close a "long and painful chapter in the history of our people."

"These leases should never have been issued in the first place," Murray said. "We're obviously very disappointed in the panel's decision today, particularly their refusal to engage with any of the arguments we raised on appeal," said David McDonald, attorney for Solenex, which is owned by Sidney Longwell. "We fully intend on continuing to fight for Solenex and the Longwell family, and we're currently considering all available avenues to do so."

The company has held the lease for more than 30 years. It had not yet drilled because of bureaucratic delays within the U.S. departments of Interior and Agriculture, prompting the company to sue in 2013.

The U.S. government canceled the lease in 2016, saying a proper environmental analysis had not been conducted, a decision Solenex challenged.

A federal judge sided with the company in 2018, saying the long amount of time between the lease being issued and canceled violated federal law.

The three-judge appellate panel ruled the judge's findings were wrong and that the government had considered Solenex's interest.

"Delay by itself is not enough to render the lease cancellation arbitrary or capricious," the ruling said.

“Change, Adaptation & Opportunity”

Shayne's Journal is a daily blog posted by Shayne Del Cohen. See email above to contact her.

During the last four months many people have become teachers...or at least proctors for their children.

Some have come to appreciate how hard classroom teachers work and have developed an appreciation for the individual relationships teachers cultivate with each student in order to bring out the best in them.

Many educational went to digital learning immediately. Some school districts had to revert to written packets as many of their students live in areas without internet connectivity or in households who do not have compatible electronic equipment.

Museum, libraries, other cultural institutions and individual artists began to provide a plethora of programming. The world, twenty years late, realized what the Age of Information could mean in terms of content, curriculum, access to personalities and minds all over the globe. What used to be stored away in museum vaults, archives and other repositories became accessible at the touch of a keystroke.

Scientists, politicians, school administrators and others grapple with the obvious question of when students and their campus might be reunited. Then there is the subtle issue of budget, given the loss of income most jurisdictions have lost.

Issues of socialization, the learning that comes with group interaction and from peers is another topic of discussion.

Bottom line: nothing will be the same.

So what has the meant for your community? What can you create?

The first fact is the basic infrastructure question. Does your community have sufficient broadband capacity to transit or utilize the shift to on-line education?

If so, several opportunities are obvious:

1. Transportation cost issues become reduced.
2. Students wishing to take advantage of post-secondary opportunities may do so without the living away expenses of dorm/food, etc.
3. Adults whose schedule responsibilities preclude enrolling in full-time programs will have additional opportunities with the availability of online courses.

If a community has members that need to return to work and cannot teach or proctor their children, the community library, education center or similar space can become a mini-school with staff doing the teaching/proctoring. Older students may assist as well as any interested adults. It does take a village and signals a return to traditional ways.

The community can become very active in providing learning experiences and adventures about the things and skills they want their children to know in addition to the school provided curriculum.

It also is a great opportunity for any community to work with their school district to accomplish many things that have been discussed but never put into action.

Classrooms of all levels will need guest lecturers, demonstrators and story tellers to make their on-line content vary from a single face on the screen all day.

Tribes that have produced videos should offer this expanded content. From cultural material to historical, from health related to the flora/fauna of the area, this is a perfect time to insert local knowledge into regional education. No more talk; just action.

Printed material, from manuscripts and novels to informational sheets should be placed in school libraries or district curriculum centers if there are insufficient funds for placement in every classroom.

With the second pandemic of racial injustice getting a fair amount of airing, two major issues may also be addressed with prudent tribal leadership.

It is well known that ethnic children complain and suffer self-esteem issues because there is no one that looks like them in their school or reading materials. What better time to address it than now?

Secondly, we all know that history texts, etc leave so much out. Now is the time to also correct this.

The conversation - or lack thereof - about symbols will rage on. Tearing down a statue, however, does not provide those ignorant of the precipitous history that generated the reason for the statue.

If “out of sight” future generations will have no clue. My personal preference is that brass plaques (or audio kiosks) with factual information be placed on them so that “the other side of the story” is also told.

Many a fort is named for a Union military leader who either was before or became an “Indian fighter” after the Civil War.

Many a venerated politician has quietly promulgated policy and law disastrous to the Indian community; juxtapositioning pertinent information next to their display may prove to be the educational dialogue needed to generate critical thinking skills amongst the public.

Hospital's Secret Policy Separated American Indian Mothers From Their Newborns

Source: ProPublica a nonprofit newsroom
Contributed by Andrea Marquez, Soboba Indian Reservation, So. CA

A prominent women's hospital here has separated some Native American women from their newly born babies, the result of a practice designed to stop the spread of COVID-19 that clinicians and health care ethicists described as racial profiling.

Lovelace Women's Hospital in Albuquerque implemented a secretive policy in recent months to conduct special coronavirus screenings for pregnant women, based on whether they appeared to be Native American, even if they had no symptoms or were otherwise at low risk for the disease, according to clinicians.

The hospital screens all arriving patients for COVID-19 with temperature checks and asks them whether they've been in contact with people who have the illness. But for soon-to-be moms who appeared to be Native American, there was an additional step, according to clinicians interviewed on the condition they not be named.

Hospital staff would compare the expectant mother's ZIP code against a list of Indian reservation ZIP codes maintained by the hospital, known informally as the “Pueblos List,” a reference to New Mexico's Pueblo Indian tribes. If the pregnant woman's ZIP code matched one on the list, she was designated as a “person under investigation” for COVID-19, the clinicians said.

Lovelace does not use rapid COVID-19 tests, and babies were sometimes born before asymptomatic Native American mothers' test results came back from the lab, a process that can take up to three days. As a result, the hospital separated Native American newborns from their asymptomatic mothers in at least a half-dozen cases, one clinician said.

Such separations deprive infants of close, immediate contact with their mothers that doctors recommend.

“I believe this policy is racial profiling,” one clinician said. “We seem to be applying a standard to Native Americans that isn't applied to everybody else. We seem to be specifically picking out patients from Native communities as at-risk whether or not there are outbreaks at their specific pueblo or reservation.”

At Lovelace, only women who appear to be Native American were singled out for the additional examination, even if they showed no symptoms and had not been in contact with a person who has tested positive for the illness, clinicians said.

“This isn't about where you live or if you live in a hot spot — it's about whether someone thinks you look Native,” a clinician explained. “The only people for whom we've been told to check ZIP codes are patients who appear to be Native.

“Unless there is a life-threatening issue, we do not take babies from their moms,” a clinician explained. “It is standard practice and policy for babies to be immediately put on the mother, before and during the cutting of the umbilical cord, and to leave them there for at least an hour.”

A Man-made cathedral burns and the world is shocked. American Indian graves are dug up to make way for a pipeline and no one says a word

HISTORICAL FACT: “Racism has been with us since Genesis and will be with us until Revelation.”

However, it doesn't make it right. My point is that in American we have made great strides in addressing and correcting this problem and still have a long ways to go. But to think the current extremism is helping is also wrong.

Two wrongs have never equaled a right! Law and order must be restored.
