MORONGO

Southern California:

Morongo Tribal Chairman, Robert Martin Retires

Tribal Chairman Robert Martin, a nationally recognized and respected leader in Indian Country who guided the Morongo Band of Mission Indians near Palm Springs, CA for three decades, will retire from tribal government, effective July 1, 2021.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed my journey as I worked with our Tribal Council, our membership and leaders in all branches of governments to advance self-reliance and tribal sovereignty," said Robert Martin, who decided not to seek reelection in June after six consecutive terms as chairman.

"I'm proud of the great progress our tribe and our Tribal Council have made together during my tenure as we created new economic and educational opportunities for our members, our region, and all of Indian Country," Robert Martin said. "I am confident that the next generation of tribal leaders will continue the important work of advancing tribal sovereignty."

Elected to his first term as chairman in 1983, Robert Martin served 18 years as chairman and another 11 years on the Morongo Tribal Council over the next four decades.

Charles Martin, no relation to Robert Martin, was elected as the new Morongo Tribal Chairman and was seated July 1, 2021. He has served 12 years on the Morongo Tribal Council. Born and raised on the Morongo Reservation, Charles Martin is deeply committed to service and leadership within the tribe.

His career in both tribal leadership and business development has been characterized by a strong work ethic leading to career experience in numerous fields including public safety, entertainment and organizational management.

"Hardworking, engaging, and entrepreneurial, Chairman Robert Martin's leadership transcended generations and cultures," said Charles Martin. "He is an inspiration and a role model for tribal leaders everywhere, and we look forward to benefiting from his continuing wisdom and counsel for many years to come."

During his time in tribal leadership, Robert Martin helped lift Morongo from generations of crushing poverty and neglect into the economic and cultural powerhouse it is today. A consummate diplomat, Robert Martin's warm nature, deep insights and calming demeanor in the face of challenges were the hallmarks of his steady leadership.

"Chairman Robert Martin has - and will continue to be a pillar in Indian Country," said California State Assemblymember James Ramos. "Chairman Martin serves as a role model for so many of us and I thank him for his teachings."

Robert Martin grew up on the Morongo Reservation, helping his family raise cattle. A lifelong resident of the San Geronio Pass, he graduated from Banning High School, studied business at Mt. San Jacinto Community College and worked as a contractor and homebuilder before entering tribal government.

A fierce champion of self-reliance, Robert Martin led Morongo when the tribe joined with the Cabazon Band of Mission Indians to block state and county officials from shutting down the desert tribes' high-stakes bingo and card parlors in 1986.

That struggle led the Morongo and Cabazon tribes to secure the landmark 1987 U.S. Supreme Court decision that confirmed the sovereignty of Indian tribes across the nation, and their right to establish gaming operations. That watershed decision fueled an economic and social renaissance that brought roads, clean water, housing, health care, jobs and education to reservations across the U.S.

"There were some in Indian Country who told us to quit because they thought we were risking too much," Robert Martin recalled years later. "Some thought we should be content with modest bingo halls and small card rooms. But I felt the issue was too important to give up."

Robert Martin oversaw construction of the original Casino Morongo in 1994 and, 10 years later, the development of the $250 million Morongo Casino Resort & Spa. The towering 27-story resort remains the tallest building between Los Angeles and the Arizona border, and was expanded in 2020.

Under Robert Martin's leadership, Morongo also diversified its business portfolio with new ventures in finance, health care, manufacturing and retail. Today, Morongo's business enterprises generate nearly $3 billion annually in regional economic activity and provide over 2,500 jobs, making the tribe one of Riverside County's largest employers.

The tribe's successful businesses fund Morongo's vital tribal government services for its members, including healthcare, public safety, fire protection, education, and social services.

"Without a doubt, Chairman Robert Martin was instrumental in setting Morongo on a path of financial stability and economic success that will benefit generations of tribal members for years to come," said Riverside County 5-District Supervisor Jeff Hewitt.

From meetings at the White House to offering testimony before the U.S. Congress, the California State Legislature and the Riverside County Board of Supervisors, Robert Martin worked closely with city, county, state and federal lawmakers on a multitude of issues including economic development, land use, water, energy, education, the environment, transportation and tribal gaming.

Robert Martin's devotion to protecting tribal sovereignty and Indian culture led him to fight for the rights of Native children, driving Morongo to join other tribes, state attorneys general and child welfare organizations in defending the Indian Child Welfare Act against a 2018 court challenge.

A passionate defender of Morongo's rich culture and tribal traditions, Robert Martin remains deeply committed to developing future tribal leaders. He helped establish a tuition-free college preparatory academy at the Morongo Reservation - the first of its kind in the nation - and ardently supports college scholarship programs to help tribal youth secure a higher education.

U.S. Supreme Court in a 6-3 Vote Ruled California Charities law unconstitutional

Source: National Review

On July 1, 2021 the Supreme Court struck down a unconstitutional California law that required charities to report the identities of their major donors.

And although the challenge to the California law received overwhelming support for both side of the political spectrum the National Public Radio reported the courts decision: “The Supreme Court has struck down a law California law t requiring non-profits to disclose their large donors with the state - siding with rich donors and their desire to remain anonymous.”

The Times goes on to note that the law was challenged by Americans for Prosperity Foundation, “a group affiliated with the Koch family,” and the Thomas More Law Center, “a conservative Christian public-interest law firm.” But, as Casey Mattox points out, it’s possible “that no constitutional case has ever seen the diversity of amici present in AFPP v Bonta.”

Among the groups that filed amicus briefs arguing that the law was an violation of the First Amendment were the ACLU, NAACP, the Legal Defense and Educational Fund,

Human Rights Campaign, PETA, PEN, and the Southern Poverty Law Center.

The gravity of the privacy concerns in this context is further underscored by the filings of hundreds of organizations as amici curiae in support of the petitioners. Far from representing uniquely sensitive causes, these organizations span the ideological spectrum, and indeed the full range of human endeavors: from the American Civil Liberties Union to the Proposition 8 Legal Defense Fund; from the Council on American-Islamic Relations to the Zionist Organization of America; from Feeding America—Eastern Wisconsin to PBS Reno. The deterrent effect feared by these organizations is real and pervasive, even if their concerns are not shared by every single charity operating or raising funds in California.

Many in political media simply can’t help themselves. They synthesize everything through the prism of race or class — or both — and are unable to comprehend that neutral constitutional principles can often go beyond those issues.

JAMES C. RAMOS
Assemblymember, District 40

MY VIEW by Emie C. Salgado, Jr.

Assemblymember, James C. Ramos once again proves to be a man of action as he went to bat for the American Indian Education Center.

The California Department of Education had notified the 20 California American Indian Centers located through out the State that the unexpended funds for the fiscal year because of the covid-19 lock down would be returned to the state. The request by the Indian Education Centers for the unexpended funds to be carried over fell on deaf ears while all other education funds within the state were allowed to be carried over.

However, once Assemblymember Ramos was asked for help he was able to rectify the problem and the Indian Education Centers were allowed to carry over the education funds to the FY 2021-22.

The California American Indian Education Center were established in 1974 by President Reagan when he was Governor of California. Senate Bill 2264 allowed for the establishment of 10 American Indian Education Center within the State that allowed Indian Tribes and Tribal organizations to contact and manage their own education programs.

Today, this may seen insignificant, but in 1974 it was unheard of and it was the first time in the history of the Nation that the American Indian people were allowed to provide direct educational service for their children or services of any kind.

A year later in 1975, President Nixon’s signature American Indian legislation Public Law 93-638, The Indian Self-Determination and Education Act was pass which expanded on Reagan’s idea allowing for the American Indian Tribes and Tribal organizations to contract and provide all government services. It allowed for tribes to become self-governed.

Again, this may seen in significate today but believe me in 1974 and 75 it was a major breakthrough for the American Indian Tribes and people.

It has been almost a half a century since these landmark legislations and would only seem appropriate to suggest total tribal leadership over all aspects of our Tribal Communities.

Again, I would like to offer my sincere thanks to Assemblymember, James C. Ramos for all his help in restoring the American Indian Centers funds.

NOTE: Assemblymember, James C. Ramos is an enrolled member of the San Manuel Band of Mission Indians and in the first and only California American Indian to be elected to the California State Legislator.

The irony is that someday the signifies of Ramos achievement may be as insignificant as the Indian legislation that was presented in this article as the number of California Tribal member are elected to the State Legislator.

But for now, James C. Ramos is our torch bearer and as such we should all support him.

Dr. Joely Proudfit First American Indian Woman Appointed to Commission Advocating For Women and Girls

Source: The San Diego Union-Tribune * Contributed by Gary Ballard, San Diego CA

Gov. Gavin Newsom has appointed Carlsbad resident and professor Joely Proudfit to the Commission on the Status of Women and Girls, making her the first Indigenous woman to serve the organization.

Proudfit (Luiseno/Payomkawichum) is a professor at California State University, San Marcos who has served as American Indian studies chair and director of the California Indian Culture and Sovereignty Center since 2008.

During Proudfit's four-year term, she not only plans to support the concerns of all women, she also hopes to highlight issues that impact Indigenous women and girls disproportionately.

Indigenous women and girls face disproportionately high rates of murder, domestic violence, sexual assault and disappearance in comparison to their non-native counterparts. A 2018 report from the Urban Indian Health Institute found that murder is the third-leading cause of death for Indigenous women and the Department of Justice reports nearly half of Indigenous women experience sexual assault.

"I think this is the platform in which to share with the rest of the state, the rest of the 40 million people that live here, about our Native women and girls and our presence and the contributions that we make to this state," Proudfit said.

The issues the demographic faces can be multifaceted and complex, Proudfit said, adding that she hopes she can help the commission to understand the complexity and diversity of the barriers that Native women face.

In stepping into the role, Proudfit will join La Mesa Assemblymember Dr. Akilah Weber as the second commissioner from San Diego County.

The Commission on the Status of Women and Girls was launched in 1965 "to promote equality and justice for all women and girls," in collaboration with the governor and state lawmakers, according to its website. It is made up of 15 members — seven of whom are appointed by the governor on a rotating basis — who advocate for reproductive choice, educational equity, economic equity and educating the community on the issue of violence against women.

Holly Martinez, the commission's interim executive director, said she looks forward to everything Proudfit will bring to the table, from her experience as an educator at CSU San Marcos to her perspective on the needs of California's diverse population.

"Having Professor Proudfit ... bring in the perspective of Indigenous women and Native Americans is an incredible addition and a much-needed voice on our commission," Martinez said.

The commission has programs that support women and girls on issues related to equitable pay, sexual assault victim services, access to abortion, voting equity, and in support of careers in STEAM fields — short for science, technology, engineering, art and math.

Much of the organization's upcoming work will be related to recovering from the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic and the economic recession it caused, Martinez said.

"As we look forward and move the work of the commission forward, we're going to be really focusing on women's and girls' economic security and recovery, ways to champion and improve their health and wellness through programs and policy work, as well as really understanding the challenges women and girls face uniquely through the burden of both race and sex discrimination," Martinez said.

A study from the California Budget & Policy Center found that 54 percent of California women lived in households that lost earnings during the pandemic, with Latino and Black women being even more likely to lose income. As of February, 11.8 percent of women were unemployed, compared to 10.7 percent of men.

For women, working from home during the pandemic has been more disruptive to their careers compared to men, a report from the Center for the Advancement of Women at Mount Saint Mary's University found.

Women were more likely to leave the workforce during the pandemic and more likely to provide additional childcare than men (41 percent compared to 15 percent). Men were more likely to report feeling more productive at home where children are present than women (77 percent compared to 46 percent), the report found. They were also more likely to report that working from home had a positive impact on their careers (57 percent) in comparison to women (29 percent).

Proudfit added that the COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted some of the inequities that the Indigenous communities faces, especially when it comes to access to health care, education, employment opportunities and business development.

To address the impacts the COVID-19 pandemic has had on women throughout the state, the commission is projected to receive $7.9 million in the annual budget.

In addition to her work in academia, Proudfit is also the founder of two companies: a public relations agency and liaison between Indigenous and non-Indigenous organizations (Naqmayam Communications), and Native Media Strategies, which aims to improve authentic representation of Indigenous peoples in Hollywood.

Throughout her career, Proudfit has found inspiration in many other Indigenous filmmakers, researchers and advocates on the local and national mediascape.

Her inspirations include professor Patricia Dixon (Pauma Band of Luiseno Indians), poet Suzan Shown Harjo (Cheyenne/Muscogee Creek), former tribal chairwoman Mary Ann Martin Andreas of the Morongo Band of Mission Indians and America's first prima ballerina Maria Tallchief (Osage Nation).

There's also Deb Haaland (Laguna Pueblo), who became the first Indigenous cabinet secretary when she was tapped by President Biden earlier this year to lead the Department of the Interior, which oversees the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Whether it's through her service to the Commission on the Status of Women and Girls or through articles she writes highlighting new film and television projects created by Native Americans, spotlighting the Indigenous community for future generations is a core driver behind what she does.

More so than anything, she is inspired to work in support of Indigenous women's issues through her work as an academic, storyteller and media maker in large part for her 9-year-old daughter, and Proudfit hopes she'll feel empowered to do meet any goals her heart desires.

"Representation truly does matter, and we need to have role models, we need to be seen and heard, and people need to understand that Native women are part of the tapestry that is America," Proudfit said.

Anti-American Members of Congress Use 4th of July to Promote Racism

Source: Washington Examiner, July 5, 2021 * Contributed by Franklin Motte, Moreno Valley CA

Democratic Rep. Cori Bush disputed the Fourth of July's message of independence on Sunday, saying the holiday only represents freedom "for white people."

"When they say that the 4th of July is about American freedom, remember this: the freedom they're referring to is for white people," Bush, a member of the left-wing "Squad," wrote on Twitter amid celebrations of the 245th Independence Day. "This land is stolen land and Black people still aren't free."

"We know what our own freedom looks like," Bush wrote hours later in a follow-up tweet. "End the slavery permitted under the 13th amendment. End the War on Drugs. End police violence. End health care, housing, and education apartheid. WE are the experts on our own liberation. And we won't stop until it's won."

Bush's analysis garnered sympathy and praise among some tweeters

"Yes because if any Black person is successful in life it proves Black people are free, with equal opportunity," author Tim Wise, who describes himself as an antiracism educator, sarcastically wrote in response to a tweet urging people to consider Bush's success as a rebuttal to her claims. "So when Madam CJ Walker became a millionaire in 1911, obviously all Black people could have done it and it's their own fault if they didn't. Airtight logic..."

Maxine Waters went on an anti-American rant in a July 4 Twitter post where she claim the creeds laid out in the Declaration of Independence didn't give 'equal rights' to black people or women.

"Need I say more?" Waters wrote on July 3, 2021. Others pushed back on the notion that life in the United States has not improved for black Americans since 1776.

"Black people are free. To say they aren't is to lie," Seth Dillon, CEO of satire website the Babylon Bee, responded to Wise. "And they have every opportunity in this country, including the opportunity to run for Congress, like Cori Bush. To say they don't is to lie. For what purpose do you want them to think of themselves as slaves when they aren't?"

"Hateful, divisive lies," Republican Sen. Ted Cruz wrote in response. "The Left hates America. Believe them when they tell you this."

"You can stop with the racism now Cori and put your race card back in your pocket," Republican Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene wrote. "4th of July is freedom for all from a tyrannical government."

The rise of critical race theory, or the philosophy that systemic racism is enshrined in U.S. institutions, has prompted many on the Left to suggest the birth of the U.S. was not in 1776 with the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, but rather in 1619, at the outset of slavery.

The critical race theory has been met with controversy. Those on the Left have celebrated the philosophy. Nikole Hannah-Jones, the founder of the 1619 Project, was granted tenure at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill after a weekslong fight about her promotion of critical race theory.

Military leaders have also signaled a degree of support for critical race theory in military training, with Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman General Mark Milley, who is white, testifying before Congress that he wants "to understand white rage."

"I've read Karl Marx. I've read Lenin," Milley said. "That doesn't make me a communist. So, what is wrong with understanding ... the country which we are here to defend?"

"I want to understand white rage, and I'm white," he continued, adding that the military should be "widely read" on various topics, including race relations.

The Right has been critical of the philosophy, with Sen. Tom Cotton, an Army veteran, slamming its use in the military as detrimental to unit cohesion.

"We cannot have an Army, a Navy, a Marine Corps, an Air Force, or a Space Force where young troopers are looking to their left and right and seeing not fellow citizens who took an oath to the Constitution, someone who's willing to lay down their life not just for their country but to keep you alive," he said during a virtual event hosted by the Heritage Foundation.

Supreme Court ruling is a damning condemnation of Harris and Xavier Becerra

Source:  by Kaylee McGhee White * Contributed by Andrea Marquez, Soboba Indian Rez.

The Supreme Court ruled 6-3 this week that California's donor disclosure requirement violated donors' First Amendment rights and is thus unconstitutional.

State officials upset with the decision should thank Vice President Kamala Harris and Health and Human Services Secretary Xavier Becerra, both of whom served as California's attorney general at different times, for making it necessary.

Writing for the majority, Chief Justice John Roberts noted that California didn't even bother to enforce the donor disclosure requirement until 2010, which is when Harris became the state's attorney general. At that time, Harris's office demanded that all nonprofit groups seeking to raise money in the state report the names and addresses of their major donors nationwide. And although she claimed this information would be kept private, Roberts noted a lower court found that California "was unable to ensure the confidentiality of donors' information."

One of the nonprofit organizations that sued the state "identified nearly 2,000 confidential Schedule Bs that had been inadvertently posted to the Attorney General's website, including dozens that were found the day before trial," Roberts wrote. An expert witness for the plaintiffs "also discovered that he was able to access hundreds of thousands of confidential documents on the website simply by changing a digit in the URL."

In other words, California not only demanded that nonprofit groups hand over confidential, sensitive data, but it also then made that data available to the general public by opening up these disclosures to public record requests and failing to supervise the third-party vendors who accessed the registry.

And who was the one responsible for these mistakes? Harris's office — and, later, Becerra's.

Roberts agreed with the lower court that California's donor disclosure requirement had a "chilling" effect on potential donors, many of whom had good reason to remain anonymous. He pointed to evidence provided by the plaintiffs that several of their supporters had been "subjected to bomb threats, protests, stalking, and physical violence." Despite this, Harris and Becerra continued to compile a wealth of information, including sensitive details such as an individual donor's home address, and took to court any nonprofit organization that refused to comply with the mandate.

Harris and Becerra proved time and time again throughout their respective tenures as California's attorney general that they did not care one lick about constitutional liberties. Harris spent years targeting the Americans for Prosperity Foundation simply because it was funded by the libertarian-conservative Koch brothers, and Becerra used the majority of his time in office to sue Catholic nuns who believed that Obamacare's contraceptive mandate violated their religious beliefs.

At least the Supreme Court saw Harris and Becerra as the power-hungry authoritarians that they are. Let's hope that the next California attorney general is better.

Is Insanity Contagious? MY VIEW by Ernie C. Salgado, Jr.

So why does Gwen Berry get a pass for her antics? Isn't political activism a violation of the RULES?

Has anyone besides me noticed that the main stream media and social media have eliminated any coverage of the Gwen Berry controversy?

And while we're talking about rules, testing and political agendas; what happened to the biological science proving the difference between male and female? Small things like muscle development, strength and bone density.

Men are men and women are women, it's a scientific fact, regardless of their mental disorder.

President Joe Biden commented Saturday, July 3, 2021 on what he thought about American runner Sha'Carri Richardson's one-month suspension for testing positive for marijuana was fair.

"Rules are the rules," Biden said. "And everyone knows what the rules were going in. Whether they should remain that way is a different issue. But the rules are rules, and I was really proud of the way she responded."

What happened to girls and women's rights and protection? It appears to be more double speak by the brain dead elected buffoons and mulita gender freaks.

In my humble opinion, political correctness and those that support this insanity have a cranium full of unprocessed sewage! And for the record Richardson has shown a lot of class.

THE LARGEST MASS SHOOTING IN US HISTORY HAPPENED December 29, 1890. When 297 Sioux Indians at Wounded Knee Creek on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota were murdered by federal agents & members of the 7th Cavalry who had come to confiscate their firearms "for their own safety and protection". The slaughter began after the majority of the Sioux had peacefully turned in their firearms. The Calvary began shooting, and managed to wipe out the entire camp. 200 of the 297 victims were women and children.

Wounded Knee was among the first federally backed gun confiscation attempts in United States history. It ended in the senseless murder of 297 people.

Gun Confiscation... the FIRST step to TOTAL CONTROL of your personal, financial and political lives!

I'M NOT A SMART MAN BUT I WOULD RATHER SEE OUR OLYMPIC TEAM LOSE EVERY EVENT THAN SEND ATHLETES,

THAT ARE ASHAMED TO REPRESENT THE COUNTRY THAT GAVE THEM THAT OPPORTUNITY.

Saul Alinsky’s “8-steps To Create a Socialist State”

MY VIEW by Ernie C. Salgado, Jr.

Saul Alinsky’s “8-steps to Create a Socialist State” is the bedrock of the American Socialist Democratic Party. I believe it’s important for you to understanding want it means.

Who was Saul Alinsky? He was an American community organizer and writer. He is generally considered to be the founder of modern community organizing. He is often noted for his book Rules for Radicals (1971) and his “8-steps to topple a nation and create a socialist state” which are as follows:

1) Healthcare – Control healthcare and you control the people.

Best example is Obamacare which is the first step to a single payer system if total government control. Just look at the mess at the veterans hospitals.

2) Poverty – Increase the Poverty level as high as possible, poor people are easier to control and will not fight back if you are providing everything for them to live.

The current covid-19 was a perfect example of how the government can take control of the economy under threat of imprisonment for trying to provide shelter, safety and food for your family. Then forcing the people to be dependent in the government and then controlling them. But allowing rioters to run free.

3) Debt – Increase the debt to an unsustainable level. That way you are able to increase taxes, and this will produce more poverty.

Obama increase the national debt from $10-Trillion to over $20-Trillion in 7-years. And Socialist Lite, Bush II increased it from $6-Trillion to $10-Trillion and now we have runaway fright train on a path to economic disaster. Taxes have already gone up causing the price of goods and services to go up which will lead us into inflation on a massive scale.

4) Gun Control – Remove the ability to defend themselves from the Government. That way you are able to create a police state.

Gun control has gotten completely out of control which fits right into the agenda of the Marxist. Stop for a second and take a second look at all the laws on gun control, they are all directed at the law bidding American citizens. Criminals are the ones using guns and breaking the laws. Again, look at the facts. Maine is an open carry a gun state and has the lowest gun crime in the nation while in Chicago only criminal are allowed to have guns and it’s weekly murder rate is higher than some state annual rate. Blacks killing Blacks is not even a topic of consideration for our Nations leaders.

5) Welfare – Take control of every aspect of their lives (Food, Housing, and Income).

You bet, during the Obama years over 40-million Americans were in welfare or receiving food stamps simply because it fit the liberal agenda and the economy was in the tank and they didn’t have a clue in how to create jobs by bring back production to America. But when Trump made it happen he was attacked in every front. One attack was because the number of people receiving welfare and food stamps dropped.

6) Education – Take control of what people read and listen to – take control of what children learn in school.

The public schools in America has been taken over by the teachers union that leans to the far left. Over the last 50-years the K-12 public schools in America have gone from number one in the world to the bottom 10 percent.

Many teacher are not qualified to be in the classroom as teacher mainly due to their own lack of quality education and promotional criteria is based on seniority as opposed to ability.

A great majority if the students graduating high school can’t read above the 3rd grade reading level.

Social promotion and participation are the norm not basic academic skills. And now the public schools serve as indoctrination center for Socialism and Marxism through the critical race theory curriculum.

A complete renovation of the public education system is needed to a basic system of “Mastery.” A Mastery education system allows each student to advance from one level to the next at their own level of ability.

7) Religion – Remove the belief in the God from the Government and schools.

Although over 85-percent of Americans believe in God the courts have ruled that we can’t teach about God in the public schools. The movement has moved into the workplace and with the reinvention of “Political Correctness” and “Cancel Culture,” which are both the creations of Russia’s Josef Stalin to eliminate free speech and censor rivals. He also imprisoned and killed his opponents. Some estimates are that 20 to 30-million Russians were murdered by Stalin.

The American Socialist haven’t gotten there yet, but it won’t be long. In fact the imprisonment of several of the January 6, 2021 capitol protestors that have been denied bail is viewed by many as partisan politics since not one Black Lives Matter, Antifa or Cancel Culture rioter has been refused bail.

The concept of establishing “Re-Education Camps” was discussed after the 2020 election but didn’t have the support needed, however, it ‘s still on the back burned for now.

8) Class Warfare – Divide the people into the wealthy and the poor. This will cause more discontent and it will be easier to take (Tax) the wealthy with the support of the poor.

The division of the people against one another as rich and poor is textbook Karl Marx. However, it was rejected by Dr. Martin Luther King because he did not reject the principals of America but rather the laws that prevented equality.

How ever the western Marxist proved to be resilient and over the last 30 years have recreated the Marxist teaching into an acceptable model from a class conflict to one of “Oppression and Privileged.”

The wealthy as defined by Karl Marx as the “Oppressor and Privileged” are now all the “White People” including those that lived over 500 years ago for their crimes real or imagined against the “People of Color,” which includes ever race and ethic group on the planet but more specifically in America. However, Jewish people are also consider “White and Evil,” as are people of “Color” that don’t conform to their Marxist ideology.

The K-12 curriculum that has been adopted by that National Teachers Association and is currently being implemented in the public schools in 17 states in the USA is best known as the critical race theory. Ironically due to the government imposed shut down and the implementation of online home teaching many parents became aware of what their children were being taught and raised their objections with the local school authorities only to find themselves on the receiving end of harsh political retaliation.

Cancel Culture has weaponized “Political Correctness” “Social Justice” and “McCarthyism” to cancel the freedom of speech and due process rights of the targeted individuals, business or organization. Most folks under the age of 65 most likely don’t have s clue who senator Joe McCarthy or Josef Stalin were unless they were students of recent history, but for the majority of the population this is true.

The basic premise of the Cancel Culture agenda is; “Freedom of Speech for Me, but Not For You.” Is it working out for them? You bet it is! According to recent studies 98.5 percent of the Colleges and Universities in the Nation do not allow free speech and the 1.5 percent that do are private schools. Another example of the suppression of free speech is a recent Gallup poll indicated that 77 percent of conservatives are afraid to share their political beliefs publicly.

Please do your own due diligent. Don’t be fooled by the main stream and social media into believing we are a racist Country. There is no denial that America has oppressed many ethnic groups which include white people as well like the Irish and Italians and white religious people like the Mormons. Many if the American Indian tribal people are still forced to live in poverty because of failed government oversight policies. Yet, American has made major progress in correcting these issues. To pit people against each other because of skin color is racist, stupid and wrong.

Form of Oppression	Privileged Oppressive Group	Target/Victim Group
Sexism	Men	Women
Racism	White People	People of Color
Heterosexism	Heterosexual People	LGBTQ People
Classism	Wealthy People	Working Class & Poor People
Religious Oppression	Christian People	All Others

The chart above was taken from a K-12 curriculum called “Forms of Oppression.” This curriculum was authorized and funded in the amount of $1- million by the Santa Barbara school district in CA. The chart is in alliance with the Critical Race Theory core curriculum.

FREEDOM IN AMERICA IS AT RISK

“Freedom is the right to question and change the established way of doing things. It is the continuous revolution of the marketplace. It is the understanding that allows us to recognize shortcomings and seek solutions.”
“Freedom is not something to be secured in any one moment of time. We must struggle to preserve it every day. And freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction.”

President, Ronald Reagan

There's an easy way to see if Critical Race
Theory is racist or not.

Take the word White
out of every sentence and replace it with the word Black. If it suddenly sounds racist then CRT was racist from the start.
