Like the miner’s canary, the Indian marks the shifts from fresh air to poison gas in our political atmosphere; and our treatment of Indians ... reflects the rise and fall in our democratic faith.” - Felix S. Cohen, 1953. (pg 20)

On June 22, 2021, the Secretary of the Interior, Deb Haaland, announced the Federal Indian Boarding School Initiative, directing the Department of the Interior by Secretarial Memorandum, to undertake an investigation of the loss of human life and lasting consequences of the Federal Indian boarding school system.

For nearly two centuries, the Federal Government was responsible for operating or overseeing Indian boarding schools across the United States and its territories. Today, the Department is therefore uniquely positioned to assist in the effort to recover the histories of these institutions.

The Federal Indian Boarding School Initiative Report, was released in May 2022 under the leadership of the Department of the Interior, investigated the conditions that led to the creation of and the conditions inside Native American boarding schools. This report shows for the first time that between 1819 and 1969, the United States operated or supported 408 boarding schools across 37 states (or then-territories), including 21 schools in Alaska and 7 schools in Hawaii. The report also states that about half of the boarding schools were managed by various church organizations.

Of the 408 Federal Indian boarding schools, approximately 90 schools (22 percent) might still operate as educational facilities. However, not all 90 institutions still board children or are federally supported. (Pg 8)

The catchphrase “Kill the Indian, Save the Man” was commonly used within the Indian boarding school system it was not mentioned in the report.

If there is any question to the intent of the government this statement should make it Christal clear. The Department stated it was “indispensably necessary that [the Indians be placed in positions where they can be controlled, and finally compelled, by stern necessity, to resort to agricultural labor or starve,” later adding that “if it be admitted that education affords the true solution to the Indian problem, then it must be admitted that the boarding school is the very key to the situation.” (Pg 37 & 38)

Although the report is only the “tip of the ice berg” for the lack a more appropriate metaphor and the investigation needs to continue as recommended by the primary investigator, Assistant Secretary - Indian Affairs Bryan Newland and the scope of the investigation should be expanded to include other providers.

The horror of government agents forceable taking your children from their home and Beginning with President Washington, the stated policy of the Federal Government was to replace the Indian’s culture with our own. This was considered “advisable” as the cheapest and safest way of subduing the Indians, of providing a safe habitat for the country’s white inhabitants, of helping the whites acquire desirable land, and of changing the Indian’s economy so that he would be content with less land. Education was a weapon by which these goals were to be accomplished (pg 21) “ in many case never to see them again, is unimageable. Nor is the phycological impact on the American Indian families. The hopelessness had to be unbearable to say the least.

All of this inhumanity for the single purpose of forcing the American Indian people to surrender their lands by creating the dependency on the federal government is inexcusable nor is it justifiable.

To say they succeeded in creating a tribal dependency in the federal government would be an understatement, but to say that the “Brainwashing” was s total success would be incorrect.

In 1905, after nearly 20 years of U.S. prisoner of war captivity, Geronimo (Goyaałé) was temporarily released from Fort Sill, Oklahoma to attend the inauguration of U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt. Geronimo also negotiated to visit the Carlisle Indian Industrial School in Pennsylvania. Speaking to the Federal Indian boarding school attendees, Goyaałé said: “You are all just the same as my children to me, just the same ... when I look at you all here ... You are here to study, to learn the ways of white men; do it well.” (Pg 101)

The message Geronimo gave to the students at Haskell in 1905 was to learn the ways of the white man so that the battles of the future could be won on a different battlefield.

And although it has take almost a century the American Indian people are using the very weapon of the educational process that was used against them to resurrect tribal values, customs and traditions as well as making their voices heard at the policy making level of both the states and federal government levels.

Still another despicable strategy that was implemented against the American Indian people was alcohol. And to this very day alcohol abuse and other mind altering drug continue to pledge the American Indian Tribal Communities throughout the Nation.

Substance abuse is at an epidemic level in Indian Country, yet many tribal leaders refuse to acknowledge it nor does Indian Health Service provide adequate funding to alcoholism or drug abuse. And until this illness is addressed the American Indian people will continue to struggle to maintain their freedom. This issue was not addressed in the investigation.

However, the suggestion by Benjamin Franklin that “RUM” (Alcohol) be used against the Indian people to get rid of the them for the benefit of the white people, was included as follows. “...And, indeed, if it be the design of Providence to extirpate these savages in order to make room for the cultivators of the earth, it seems not improbable that rum may be the appointed means.” - Benjamin Franklin. (Pg 25)

The report reveals that, outside the scope of the Federal Indian Boarding School Initiative, the Department identified over 1,000 other Federal and non-Federal institutions, including Indian day schools, sanitariums, asylums, orphanages, and stand-alone dormitories that may have involved education of American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian people, mainly Indian children. (Pg 84)

In the mid-eighties American Indian Movement Co-Leader Russell Means said, “The American people are the new Indians,” and his prophecy is becoming clearer by the day. The most recent is the propose “Department of Misinformation,” which is in truth “Government Censorship.”

And as EVIL and INHUMAIN as it was for the American Indian people the current ideology of the American Socialist political Party is proposing the same process to be used for the “Re-Education” of the American citizens that oppose their way of thinking. Although the rhetoric had been put on the “Back burner,” for the time being.

I mention this because the intentions are the same, control and simulation of the masses. It is not my intent to minimize the evil, cruciality and inhumanity suffered by our people at the hand of the United State Government.

The Federal Indian boarding school system deployed systematic militarized and identity -alteration methodologies to attempt to assimilate American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian children through education, including but not limited to the following:

(1) renaming Indian children from Indian to English names;

(2) cutting hair of Indian children;

(3) discouraging or preventing the use of American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian languages, religions, and cultural practices; and

(4) organizing Indian and Native Hawaiian children into units to perform military drills. (Pg 7)

The United States has for nearly two centuries consistently recognized that Indian boarding schools comprised a system for Indian education: “Indian schools must train the Indian youth of both sexes to take upon themselves the duties and responsibilities of citizenship. To do this requires a system of schools and an organization capable of preparing the Indian young people to earn a living either among their own people or away from the reservation homes and in competition with their white brethren. This contemplates a practical system of schools with an essentially vocational foundation.” (Pg 41)

The Dawes Severalty Act of 1887 alone, which turned territories from collective Indian ownership into individual Indian land allotments, Congress intended, “the actual results of the law were a diminishing of the Indian tribal economic base from 140 million acres to [approximately] 50 million acres, and severe social disorganization of the Indian family.” Congress further concluded that the Dawes Act’s “land policy was directly related to the Government’s Indian education policy because proceeds from the destruction of the Indian land base were used to pay the costs of taking Indian children from their homes and placing them in Federal boarding schools—a system designed to dissolve the Indian social structure.” (Pg 44)

In 1803, President Thomas Jefferson said “...alongside the assimilation policy, was to encourage Indian Tribes to purchase goods on credit so as to likely fall into debt, which would cause Indian Tribes to cede their lands to the United States ...” (Pg21)

Assistant Secretary Newland makes eight recommendations to the Secretary of the Interior to fulfill the Federal Indian Boarding School Initiative, of which continuing the investigation in the primary recommendation. (Pg 9)

Repatriation? No thank you! However, releasing the American Indian people from the bondage of taxation. as that institution was never a part of any tribal culture. Tribes are already free from taxation, it’s to extend the exemption to the individual tribal members.

Why I'm Suing Black Lives Matter

In a 2020 BLM reported over $90 million in donations & distributing $31.7 million leaving 68.3 million unaccounted for.

By Todd Rokita, Indiana Attorney General * Edited by Ernie C. Salgado, Jr., American Indian Reporter

You might have seen some of the recent headlines about how Black Lives Matter has spent its money.

Back in October 2020, for example, leaders of the Black Lives Matter Global Network Foundation bought a $5.8 million mansion in Southern California.

As Indiana's attorney general, I wouldn't necessarily make such events my business.

But I do make it my business when charitable donors here in my state get scammed. A big part of my job is protecting Hoosier consumers, and I take that responsibility very seriously.

So, on April 26, 2022 I filed a lawsuit against BLM, but only after it steadfastly refused to respond to a civil investigative demand that we issued back in February.

We need to know whether BLM is fulfilling its basic obligations as a nonprofit charitable organization.

In a 2020 report, BLM stated it raised over $90 million in 2020 while distributing approximately $21.7 million to 30 local organizations and affiliated chapters, including an affiliated chapter in South Bend, Indiana. However, an IRS filing by BLM for the first half of 2020 listed the organization as having zero revenue, expenses, and/or assets.

This organization also appears to have failed to follow such standard practices as filing annual reports and documenting how its funds have been spent.

So, we're investigating whether BLM has violated either the Indiana Deceptive Consumer Sales Act or the Indiana Nonprofit Corporation Act.

The reason we issued a civil investigative demand in the first place was to obtain information and documents held by BLM that were relevant to our investigation.

This situation reminds me of another event from a few years ago, when a band of con artists bilked more than $187 million from donors by claiming to represent charities helping cancer patients.

Eventually, those fraudsters entered into an agreement with the states, and the federal government settled allegations against them. Part of their scheme, though, was to start up organizations with very altruistic names — Cancer Fund of America, Cancer Support Services, Children's Cancer Fund of America, and The Breast Cancer Society.

With names like that, what decent person wouldn't want to contribute? But those organizations amounted to a get-rich-quick racket with little connection to actual cancer patients.

Which brings us back to Black Lives Matter.

Obviously, we all should believe the words of that slogan — because all lives matter. And just as all decent people want to stop cancer, so do all decent people want to stop any racial discrimination and promote equal opportunity for all people.

But is this fight truly the focus of BLM?

BLM co-founder Patrisse Cullors has described herself and fellow co-founder Alicia Garza as "trained Marxists." And at one point, BLM vowed to "disrupt the Western-prescribed nuclear family structure requirement" — i.e., the idea that a child is best nurtured in a home featuring a mother and father.

Such ideas ignore America's exceptionalism: the fact that we are unique to world history. At our founding, the best ideas for self-government came together at the same time and in the same place. Unique, indeed. And thank God for such an event. This kind of government unleashed the greatest innovation, prosperity, and upward mobility that human history ever witnessed.

There is no question that serious racial problems have been a part of our nation's history. In fact, every nation significant to world history built itself up in some degree, wrongly, on the backs of slaves. This should not be forgotten. But it should be put into context, including that our way of self-government accelerated the abolition of slavery in America. Our children should be taught to love their country, not falsely condemn it.

Again, though, our investigation into BLM does not pertain to ideology. My office already concluded that BLM is a political organization in a legal advisory opinion last year.

Rather, our investigation pertains to expectations of ethical, financial, and legal propriety on which all honest and law-abiding people can agree.

The expectation that BLM should operate in an aboveboard manner is hardly a partisan issue. In fact, California Attorney General Rob Bonta, a liberal Democrat of the sort typically endorsed and celebrated by BLM, sent the organization a letter earlier this year warning it that it could face penalties, late fees, and the revocation of its registered status as a charitable trust if it did not comply with statutory requirements.

Regardless of your political stance, the integrity of the system and the individuals running nonprofit groups matter. Nonprofit groups serve an important role in society in addressing matters of public concern, theoretically filling gaps that otherwise might require direct government assistance. For that, they receive certain benefits, chief among them not having to pay certain taxes.

Here in Indiana, we have a long history of nonprofit groups doing valuable work. But we always want to make sure that generous Hoosiers can know that the money they donate goes to the actual causes they intend to support.

For now, we suggest that those who believe that black lives matter consider donating to organizations other than the Black Lives Matter Global Network Foundation

And here in Indiana, we continue to encourage any Hoosier donors who believe they have been scammed to file a consumer complaint with my office at www.indianaconsumer.com.

Douglas Murray: Even 'dead White male' Aristotle can be de-platformed by the left thousands of years later

Source: WND

Author Douglas Murray criticizes The Washington Post for attacking ancient Greek philosopher Aristotle (384-322 B.C.) for being a racist during a Fox Nation special that aired on May 1, 2022 called "The War on the West."

This remorseless attack on the West has attacked Western peoples, its attacked Western history. It's also attacked Western ideas, the foundational ideas that we have. Every single foundational thinker in the West has now been assaulted through the dead White male lens.

Aristotle was recently attacked in The Washington Post for being, 'the grandfather of scientific racism' ... So you can now de-platform Aristotle, 3,000 years later ... The idea that these people 2,500 years ago happened not to share all of our views is now used against them.

It's also some of the thinkers who we credit in the West as being the people who came up with the concepts of rationalism, of reason. Voltaire in France, David Hume in the United Kingdom, and many more. This [is a] complete clearing away of the intellectual terrain of the past.

Small tribe takes giant leap for Indian gaming

San Manuel Band becomes first tribal nation to own/operate casino in Las Vegas with re-opening of Palms Resort Casino

STEWART HUNTINGTON • APR 28, 2022

On Wednesday, April 27, 2022 the San Manuel tribe put on a gala re-opening of the iconic Las Vegas property – a moment hailed as a milestone for Native economic development.

“It is absolutely phenomenal,” said Lane Parry, Hopi, who attended the festivities with his wife, Laura Parry, who is chairwoman of the Moapa Band of Paiutes, whose ancestral homelands are in present day Nevada. “We’ve gone through so many struggles in our lifetimes and our history that it is time for us to move forward in the development of this nation.”

The San Manuel Band’s relaunch of the Palms put it a step ahead of the Seminole Tribe of Florida, which announced in December it would buy the operations of The Mirage Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas for $1.075 billion and build a hotel in the shape of a guitar on the property. The deal is awaiting final approval by regulatory authorities.

The Mohegan Tribe of Connecticut in March 2021 became the first tribe to operate a casino in Las Vegas when it opened the Mohegan Sun Casino At Virgin Hotels Las Vegas. The tribe is not an owner of the operation.

Michelle Malkin: Aborti-mania — the perfectly planned meltdown

Op-ed views and opinions expressed are solely those of the author.
Michelle Malkin's email address s MichelleMalkinInvestigates@protonmail.com.

Just as a wave of crucial midterm primary elections kick off around the country this spring, the conveniently scheduled leak of a Supreme Court draft opinion overturning Roe v. Wade became America's new weapon of manufactured mass distraction.

Left-wing abortifa agitators descended on the Supreme Court steps in Washington, howling, "Fascist scum has got to go."

Unhinged TikTokers called for "riots," "gas" and "torches"; "burning it all to the ground" by targeting "all those old white men and the women who support them"; and "mayhem in the streets" that will dwarf the "global protests around George Floyd."

One prototypical Hollywood feminist, Amanda Duarte (a self-described "barren, child-eating sex witch"), tweeted her fantasy involving the "little white daughters" of pro-life "white supremacist lawmakers" getting "raped and impregnated by black men."

The aborticrats are not just nuts. They're evil.

An "anarchist collective" is now instructing women (yes, all of sudden, the left has discovered that biological women are really a thing) how to concoct "do it yourself" abortion pills with horse ulcer powder, corn syrup and confectioners' sugar. (Yes, these are the same types who made it a punishable offense to talk about alternative COVID-19 treatment ivermectin, (the anti-malarial drug used safely for three decades around the globe by humans and animals.)

Right on cue, anti-Christian hatred spread like a raging Colorado wildfire across the internet, from the profane, abortion-promoting rabbi who fumed, "Shame on all who hold the cross" and, "Time to go to war" to thousands of his fellow online vigilantes posting, "F— Christians" with veiled or outright threads of violence.

Planned Parenthood and the American Civil Liberties Union were at the ready in Washington, D.C., Philadelphia and New York City's Foley Square for "impromptu" protests and literal scream-fests, where masses of spontaneously gathered rabble-rousers carried spontaneously printed, carbon-copy signs from the billion-dollar-funded giants of the Death Lobby. (So much for that "paper shortage" being used to justify ditching traditional paper ballot voting, right? Told you so.)

Question the timing? It would be irresponsible not to do so. Survey the political landscape. Earlier this week, left-wing NPR reported that President Joe Biden "is losing support from Gen Z." The libs in deep-blue Massachusetts are sick of him, too, according to a new BLM's multimillion-dollar grift has now hit mainstream exposure. And the Biden Disinformation Governance Board, headed by TikTok warbling bubblehead, Hunter Biden laptop-whitewasher and Nina Jankowicz, has become a laughingstock across the board.

The engineered and coordinated aborti-mania also comes at an opportune time for Biden's Big Pharma allies. Just this week, a new study has documented more COVID-19 vaccine-induced heart infections. New surveillance data from the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System confirms a "statistically significant increased risk for Guillain-Barre syndrome (GBS) in the 3 weeks after receipt of the Janssen/Johnson & Johnson COVID-19 vaccine." And profiteering Pfizer, which is pushing Biden to approve COVID-19 shots for children under 5, was forced to release more than 90,000 pages of jab data it tried to cover up.

Make no mistake: There are no coincidences, and conspiracies are not just theories, especially in an even-numbered election year with a crumbling, bumbling commander in chief and his minions clinging to power.

Boston Globe/Suffolk University poll. Another lib outlet, government-sponsored PBS, reported last week that "independents favor the GOP right now" because "runaway inflation is hitting everyone's wallets and has given Republicans a political edge"; pollsters also found that "about half of parents with children under age 18 said they don't like how (Biden) has handled COVID."

Despite the Herculean attempts of the White House, Black Lives Matter and woke media to gin up fear over "white supremacy" as the biggest threat to our nation.

However, unbrainwashed citizens are revolting en masse against anti-white critical race theory in higher education and "social and emotional learning" (translation: thought control and behavior modification) in K-12 schools.

Jonathan Turley

Democrats' 'final line of defense' is 'outright state censorship'

Source: WND by Bob Unruh

For years Twitter has been a liberal stronghold. Leftist views were promoted and publicized, while conservative thought sometimes was ... not there.

That was a good example of free thought, free speech and free enterprise, leftists praised.

But now that Elon Musk has announced his purchase of the company, with intent to take it private and possibly Hypocritically, according to law professor, legal analyst and popular commentator Jonathan Turley.

He pointed out in a column that Musk's plans prompted Sen. Elizabeth Warren, D-Mass., to warn free speech values on social media now threatens Democracy itself.

And Barack Obama? He declared 'regulation has to be part of the answer' to the leftist claim that "disinformation" is warping the nation.

Turley noted that progressives now "have adopted a dangerous shift in their strategy of calling for corporations to censor speech."

"Obama has never been viewed as an ally on free speech by those of us who have been attacked for our absolutist views. Moreover, calling for censorship as a free speech absolutist is like claiming to be a vegetarian while calling for mandatory meat consumption," Turley charged.

"Obama favors free speech only if it does not include disinformation, including what he considers to be lies, conspiracy theories, junk science, quackery, racist tracts and misogynist screeds."

He noted that the First Amendment technically does not control private corporations like Twitter and Facebook, which have been used by liberals to "circumvent constitutional bans on censorship."

But now, with Twitter in the hands of Musk, they are alarmed, he explained.

"Democrats are falling back to their final line of defense - and finally being honest about their past use of corporate surrogates," he said. "They are now calling for outright state censorship."

He pointed out Hillary Clinton, as she often does, "stripped away any niceties or nuance," by calling for the European Union to pass a massive censorship measure.

"Clinton's call for censoring disinformation was breathtakingly hypocritical. President Obama was briefed by his CIA Director John Brennan on 'alleged approval by Hillary Clinton on July 26, 2016 of a proposal from one of her foreign policy advisors to vilify Donald Trump by stirring up a scandal claiming interference by Russian security services.' The intelligence suggested it was a means of distracting the public from her use of a private email server," he explained.

"Moreover, her call for censorship came just weeks after special counsel John Durham offered more details about the accusation that her campaign manufactured a false Russian collusion theory," he wrote.

Turlwy said under the EU plan, "users will be empowered to report illegal content online and online platforms will have to act quickly," and that would include speech that someone labels "disinformation" and also "incitement."

He said the progressive campaigners now have come full circle, advocating for government to censor what previously Democrats relied on corporations to censor.

"My journey of financial sustainability started with my mom who raised four kids on her own on a budget of $400 per month. That's true financial sustainability, and it's next to nature for us Indigenous women"

Jolain Foster, Gitxsan Nation

The only road to Net Zero runs through Indigenous lands

The key to energy projects is early participation and ownership by Indigenous peoples

MARK TRAHANT • APR 28, 2022

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA – Imagine the challenges of putting together a panel of accomplished Indigenous women who work in finance, these are the people putting together major energy and climate deals that cost millions of dollars.

Who has the credentials? Who can speak with authority? And then the real problem for the organizers of the First Nations Major Projects Coalition's Toward Net Zero by 2050 Conference, was, how do you limit the number of powerful speakers? The planners answered that question with two panels of accomplished Indigenous women working in finance.

"My journey of financial sustainability started with my mom who raised four kids on her own on a budget of $400 per month. That's true financial sustainability, and it's next to nature for us Indigenous women," said Jolain Foster. "All I can say is thank God for the fish and the moose meat that I grew up on."

Foster, Gitxsan Nation, is now a partner with the Prairies Indigenous Practice for Deloitte in Calgary. And today she said her work as an advocate supports First Nations on a journey of "economic independence through the development of equity partnerships, operational excellence and change management."

Those words — equity partnerships — are the very idea behind the Toward Net Zero by 2050 Conference. It's a conversation with some 1,300 people about energy projects involving Indigenous communities and businesses on Indigenous turf and terms. And that means Indigenous people leading the energy transition.

"It's very much about Indigenous people leading the discussion to say, 'no, we are not passive.' We are not waiting for a project to be given to us or to be included after the decisions he made on the investment, the location, the environmental studies and operation," said Mark Podlasly, one of the conference organizers.

Climate change and the goals associated with limiting greenhouse gas emissions, such as half of all vehicles being electric by 2030, is driving a sense of urgency.

Yet this is a difficult conversation because the framework of mining has been built by companies that have practiced irresponsibility. Nearly every Indigenous community has scars, or active mines, that have been destructive and one-sided. Abandoned uranium mines, Superfund sites, toxic tailings ... and on and on.

So how can this be different?

The First Nations Major Projects Coalition sees ownership, and early, full participation by Indigenous people as decision-makers, as the only way forward.

"We will need 14-times more nickel, equivalent amounts and copper, iron or lithium," says Podlasly. "And that's gonna come from Indigenous lands. Those mines are not gonna be built in downtown Seattle and downtown Los Angeles. They'll be in our territories. So we want our members, our members have asked us, 'how do we prepare for that? How do we make the right decision? So if we want to, and we do agree to host these facilities that they're done in a way that is environmentally, socially, culturally, and economically fair to the communities?"

The coalition gives Indigenous communities the technical information to make key decisions.

Podlasly is director of economic policy and initiatives at First Nations. He is a member of the Nlaka'pamux Nation.

The First Nations Major Projects Coalition includes 86 First Nations from across Canada that have been approached for a range of projects, ranging from solar and geothermal to mining within Indigenous territories. The idea was to band together to raise capital, access technical expertise from an Indigenous perspective, and help advise their members during the complex regulatory process.

"We will provide the free forum of information, which allows the community to decide, do they want to participate or not? And if they don't, that's fine. We do not take an active position in the investments. We don't take a percentage," Podlasly said. "We are Indigenous led. Our board is all Indigenous and about 70 percent of our staff are Indigenous, including Indigenous economists, Indigenous environmental science people, Indigenous hydrologists, Indigenous engineers, all to provide that service to communities."

And that brings us back to the Indigenous women in finance.

Cherie Brant said she started off wanting to be an architect. Then she landed on a study in college called "urban and regional planning."

"It was so interesting to me because it combined architecture and the built form and our landscape with politics. And I just, I was completely blown away," she said. The idea was combining the social, the environmental, and the political, seeking harmony between all three.

Her path took her to law school and she would go to conferences and talk about "sustainable development."

What does that mean? She answers herself. Sustainable economic development is about a healthy community, a healthy environment.

"So when I think about sustainable finance, it really comes back to like, 'what are the barriers? What are we trying to do? How do we pave the way for our communities to thrive and grow? And so I just think there's endless opportunities."

Brant is from Mohawks of the Bay of Quinte and Ojibway from Wikwemikong Unceded Indian Reserve. She is a partner for the Toronto law firm, Borden Ladner Gervais LLP, and a member of the board of directors for TD Bank.

In her twenty years of banking she has put together a long list of financing that includes tribal ownership of wind farms and hydroelectric projects.

Then with so many people attending the Vancouver conference there were stories of success, some that went south, and lots of ideas about what works and what's next.

"So for me, sustainability has a really wide definition. That includes all of who we are. It all of our environmental work, it's all of our work in the community. It's all of our spiritual practices. It's all of our culture and language," said Kate Finn, Osage. She is the executive director of First People's Worldwide at the University of Colorado Law School.

"I think what I love about my work at First Peoples Worldwide is building these bridges between the private sector and business people, redefining what sustainability is, and then building the business case for ethics and building the business case for sustainability, using those words, using that language and being able to be a conduit in that way."

Hillary Thatcher, Métis, says there is a relationship between business and politics. She said the Indigenous leaders she worked with showed the values that were important to their communities. "And they don't always line up with Western values." That led to questions about shared interests and path forward.

"That's where I landed in the energy space and the clean power space," she said. "I found that if you can influence public policy to create this space for Indigenous participation and economic development, you can actually yield amazing results for everybody in the society, Indigenous and non-Indigenous."

There is now a track record of a decade with major partnerships in hydro energy with First Nations in Ontario.

Chief Sharlene Gale is chair of the First Nations Major Project Coalition and also the leader of her own nation in Fort Nelson.

One of her major projects is the Tu Deh-Kah Geothermal Plant.

"This project has an interesting story because our nation has been involved in oil and gas for the last 60 years. And we had this pipeline that ran through our community that gave us royalties. And it really brought a lot of prosperity where we were able to invest that money and do a lot of things for our people. And since then that well has been depleted. And so the interesting part of this geo project is, there was a lot of work through oil and gas to get us through stage one."

The plant is a repurposed gas field and it was constructed with a $40 million grant. The power will provide all of the energy for tribal members' homes and the additional capacity will be added to the provincial grid.

The oil field provided "opportunity" for 60 years, Gale said. "And now, you know, with repurposing it, to provide a generational opportunity for our band members and seven generations to come, it's a renewable project" with so many spinoffs such as heating greenhouses for food security.

There is also a potential spinoff from the waste, the brine fluid.

"What is in the brine?" she asks. "Is there lithium in there? And we all know that in order to get to where we need to be, we're gonna have to have more lithium for battery production and what better way to do it if we can do it in a cleaner way than mining. I think that's a tremendous opportunity that we must explore as Indigenous nations."

In a panel discussion Gale said that in order for Indigenous people to get involved with a major project it has to align with our values. "And when we take, we give back."

Then when it comes to clean energy, she said, "We've already decided that we are going to lead."

FREEDOM IN AMERICA IS AT RISK

“Freedom is the right to question and change the established way of doing things. It is the continuous revolution of the marketplace. It is the understanding that allows us to recognize shortcomings and seek solutions.”

“Freedom is not something to be secured in any one moment of time. We must struggle to preserve it every day. And freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction.”

President, Ronald Reagan

THE AMERICAN DICTATORSHIP PROPAGANDA AND CENSORSHIP “Office of Disinformation”

MY VIEW by Ernie C. Salgado, Jr. American Indian Reporter

Many of you that read the header most likely won't read past this sentence, for two basic reason: 1) You have already written me off as an alarmist or a conspiracy theorist and: 2) You don't believe America is heading toward a dictatorship. Which, is acceptable because that is the basic premise of a free people.

What is not a basic premise of a free people is having government dictating on what you can say, write or practice and what you are allowed to see, read or hear. That is censorship, pure and simple.

Currently, 98 percent of the news outlets and social media is owned and controlled by liberal supporting individuals or corporations. Please do your own fact checking on and all my claims.

The ideology of a one political party rule is not a novel thought and it is in fact currently implemented in many countries throughout the world today. China, Russia and Venezuela, the latest addition to the list.

Basically these Countries begin as Socialist, Communist or some form of communal self-governance, which evolves very quickly into a dictatorship. Russia for example holds a national election of its leader that is nothing more than a mockery of a free election and anyone that may challenge it is declared a dissident and faces the wrath of the government. Almost sound close to home given the on slot of legal actions against those that challenged to 2020 election in America.

I for one, will never accept or believe that 80 million Americas voted for Joe Biden. It never happen! The guy couldn't even get 300 people to attend a rally even with the “Manchurian Candidate” (Obama) at his side. OOP'S “Misinformation.”

One good example of questionable voting was in Georgia, where a federal judge ruled against a local election board that declared over 4,000 voter ineligible to vote in the state because they were either dead, didn't live in the district any longer or didn't meet the voting criteria. It didn't matter that the federal judge is the sister of Stacy Adams, who was a party to the legal action.

The basic premise behind the one political party rule is that the central or national government is the sole power of the country. Of course this is contrary to the U.S. Constitution as the individual states have jurisdictional rights and each individual American citizen has inviolable rights as well.

This is were the “Rubber hits the road,” as the metaphor goes because as long as the U.S. Constitution upheld the individual American citizen is protected. However, the political proponents of a one political party rule while claiming to uphold the Constitution continue to institute legislation that dilute the rights of the individual American citizen.

In way of example, the most flagrant is the attacks on the first and second amendments, the rights to free speech and the rights to bear arms. And the fifth amendment, the right to due process. The law that makes it a felony to lie to the FBI is not only a violation of due process it is in violation of the Miranda Act. The Patriot Act and RICO Act are both un direct violation of the fifth amendment as well. But, since it is designed for our safety and protection its justifiable.

The never ending barrage on the second amendment need no more acknowledgement as to it insanity.

Just in case you may have been out of touch with the news, the most recent proposal by the Socialist extremist is to establish an “Office of Disinformation” within the Department of Homeland Security. Again, the selective usage of the word “Disinformation” as opposed to the correct word “Censorship” that more clearly defines the purpose of the proposed office is clearly misdirection.

Although the establishment of the proposed “Office of Disinformation” would be in direct violation if the first amendment, the GOP political opponents seem to be more concerned with the person selected to manage the project, which is in my view other misdirection. The main issue is that the establishment of a government agency to determine what is and is not, “Misinformation” is in violation of the first amendment period!

As I stated earlier, “The ideology of a one political party rule is not novel.” When the Hitler came to power in 1933, the German constitution guaranteed freedom of speech and freedom of the press. Through decrees and laws, the Nazis abolished these civil rights and destroyed German democracy.

Starting in 1934, it was illegal to criticize the Nazi government. Even telling a joke about Hitler was considered treachery. People in Nazi Germany could not say or write whatever they wanted.

In America 2022, The Socialist Democrats want to force the American people into supporting their ideology of a one political party government. To accomplish this goal, they are trying to control all forms of communication through censorship, propaganda and intimidation.

This included control of internet social media, newspapers, magazines, books, art, theater, music, movies, and radio.

The conversion of DHS's resources into the political “censoring” arm of the Socialist Democrats and the potential implications for the loss of freedom of speech in our country.

This strategy is no different than Hitler's as the basic fundamental principles of free speech will be determined by the “Ministry of Truth, AKA the Department of Disinformation,” under Homeland Security until it no longer exist.

But, first things first, this is bad for America and must be stopped because the next step might be the re-Education Center or Camps.

U.S. Supreme Court Overturns Roe vs Wade

The landmark 1973 Roe v. Wade decision that has established a constitutional right to abortion in America will now be left to each state to decide abortion issues.

U.S. Supreme Court Rule 9-0 in Boston Christian flag Case Defending Free Speech

In a public rebuke to the city of Boston, the U.S. Supreme Court has unanimously ruled the city violated the constitutional rights of Camp Constitution, whose officials asked to fly a Christian flag at city hall through a program that already had allowed multiple private interest groups to fly their banners.

“We conclude that, on balance, Boston did not make the raising and flying of private groups' flags a form of government speech,” wrote Justice Stephen Breyer, one of the court's leftists, in the opinion. “That means, in turn, that Boston's refusal to let Shurtleff and Camp Constitution raise their flag based on its religious viewpoint 'abridged' their freedom of speech.”

Tom Casey Creates Hope for Age-Related Disease Sufferers

by Julie Reeder

When Rainbow resident Tom Casey's much beloved mother passed away from Parkinson's disease in 2001, his family's grief was furthered by their sense of frustration that nothing of any enduring effectiveness was able to be done to halt her steady decline from vibrancy to involuntary movements, depression and then, with her facial expressions long frozen, her death.

Now 20 years later, Tom is the initiator of the first Institutional Review Board approved placebo-controlled study to prove in 205 years that the 'Shaking Palsy' James Parkinson described in 1817 can be significantly reversed.

Casey explained, "Previous to my study, Parkinson's was primarily treated using medications targeted 'at' the motor dysfunction that enables the patient to physically perform as best as possible while the disease progresses."

His study is currently undergoing peer-review prior to its publication. He doesn't believe there has ever been anything preceding his plasma treatment that could provide so much hope to literally 10 million sufferers to safely and simply restore their lives back to a semblance of normalcy.

While his present achievement is personally unprecedented in its positive impact, Casey's path to this point has been filled with amazing accomplishments.

Casey entered medicine via the IV business after graduating from the University of Connecticut, becoming McGaw Laboratory's ries' product manager (now B. Braun Medical) for IV, wound and urological irrigation, dialysis, pharm ad-mix, and small volume parenterals.

“By simply infusing plasma from young sex identified donors between the ages of 18 and 25 into the sex and blood-type matched aging...all the cells in their older bodies immediately respond by actively regenerating and restoring lost function, just as they did when young.”

He then left McGaw at the age of 26 to co-found the world's largest compounding pharmacy/home infusion business that came to be known as Caremark. It is now known as CVS Coram. Coram currently administers 20,000 out-of-hospital infusions a month.

While Casey's time at his infusion company was relatively brief, he went on to become involved in the development of the world's first pulsatile heart-bypass machine and then served as an officer and director of an infection control division of Kema Nobel, Sweden, before spending over 20 years as the CEO and chairman of a public applied intelligence development company whose software was honored by placement in the UCSD Engineering timecapsule (to be opened on the University's 100th anniversary).

Casey established an alliance with the Fallbrook Historical Society in reaching an unprecedented agreement with the county to create a new classification of historic registrations that included 23 historic sites and buildings in and around Fallbrook, many of which form the core of our Historic Downtown District.

Additionally, while serving as the acting chair of a San Diego North Economic Development Council public policy hearing, Casey initiated a Transportation Impact Fee review that resulted in a reduction of the cost to open a new business within the County of San Diego.

It was the launch of UCLA's stem cell research program in 2005 that started his long journey towards addressing Parkinson's.

Unfortunately, after many years of closely following the research to the point of almost establishing a stem cell clinic on the site of the former Santa Ysabel casino, Casey said it became understood that adult stem cells are tissue-specific and can only duplicate themselves, so their usefulness in disease fighting is, at best, limited.

Casey said, "At that very moment of abandonment of my stem cell clinic, I read a research paper in May 2014 that turned it all around. It was titled 'Young Blood Reverses Age-Related Impairments in Cognitive Function and Synaptic Plasticity in Mice'."

He said, "The publication in Nature Medicine pulled together research by Stanford, Harvard and other prestigious institutes in proving what many had often thought about for centuries, that young blood (plasma) may be a fountain of youth."

"In that paper, the researchers revealed that old plasma injected into young subject animals made their cells functionally old and plasma from young donors injected into old subjects made their cells functionally young," said Casey.

"Plasma, the most versatile component of human blood, contains an organically perfected mix of over 10,000 individual proteins, 5,000 different peptides, 1.8 billion exosomes per ml, 50 different gender specific hormones, 45 cytokines, enzymes and minerals." He continues, "The science of understanding the plasma proteome has advanced so far it is now understood that while we are physically programmed to age at very specific stages in our life's journey starting at 26, then reaching peaks at 34, 60 and 78, our plasma changes profoundly to control that aging to the point that it has now been shown that your age can become identified to an accuracy of within three years simply by reading its present composition, regardless of your size, shape or race."

ry). That same company in 1991, became the second highest gaining stock on NASDAQ.

Although Casey has been twice nominated for Entrepreneur of the Year and served 10 years as a member of the UCSD Industrial Liaison Committee and a member of the UCSD Chancellor's Advisory Council, he also found time for Fallbrook.

Casey served as a member of the Executive Board of Directors of the Fallbrook Chamber of Commerce. During his two years as the Chamber's chairman of Government Affairs Committee, he developed a "Historic Initiative" economic revitalization strategy by authoring, documenting and legislatively passing California's designation of Historic Route 395. He worked with local jurisdictions to install more than 120 signs along the 395 route in Southern California, including those that guide enthusiasts from San Diego to Riverside, traveling locally through Vista, Bonsall, Fallbrook, Rainbow and Temecula.

He concludes, "By simply infusing plasma from young sex identified donors between the ages of 18 and 25 into the sex and blood-type matched aging (the proteins most strongly associated with age also change significantly with sex), all the cells in their older bodies immediately respond by actively regenerating and restoring lost function, just as they did when young."

Casey states that the benefits have been reported to last as long as two years.

Casey's background in the IV business made him immediately recognize that not only has plasma been in use for 100 years, with the United States currently transfusing approximately 6,500 units per day. "Unlike stem cells," he adds, "plasma is an FDA approved biologic with an extraordinary history and record of safe use."

The FDA published in 2021 that in 2019 (their most recent data) only one plasma related and completely avoidable fatality occurred out of 2.1 million transfusions.

In Nov. 2017, with his knowledge and experience, Casey opened the world's first and presently only FDA registered and Association for the Advancement of Blood & Biotherapies (AABB), and CLIA fully accredited blood bank that exclusively collects young plasma.

While Casey continues to live in Rainbow, his business, Spectrum Plasma, Inc., is located in San Marcos, Texas. His blood bank adjoins the very large campus of Texas State University from which it recruits its volunteer donors.

"Spectrum Plasma has now filled prescriptions for hundreds of patients, including supplying young Fresh Frozen Plasma (yFFP®) to the Parkinson's disease study conducted at the Texas Medical Center: Young plasma infusions significantly improve clinical symptoms and UPDRS scores in patients with Parkinson's disease," noted Dian J. Ginsberg M.D., Principle Investigator.

The Unified Parkinson's Disease Rating Scale (UPDRS) is the most widely applied rating instrument for Parkinson's disease as it includes 31 items contributing to three subscales: (I) Mentation, Behavior, and Mood; (II) Activities of Daily Living; and (III) Motor Examination.

While this success is hopefully the first of many age-related advancements to be supported by Spectrum Plasma, this study, which Casey has dedicated to his mother, Ellen, will always be the dearest to his heart.

Kathy Boudin, Weather Underground member, dead at 78

“All in the Family”

MY VIEW by Ernie C. Salgado, Jr.

Kathy Boudin, who spent 22 years in prison for her part in the deadly 1981 Brink's armored truck robbery as a member of the radical militant group Weather Underground, died of cancer at the age of 78 in New York on May 1, 2022.

In October, 1981, Boudin and members of the group teamed up with the Black Liberation Army for the robbery to help fund their anti-government campaigns. They targeted a Brink's armored truck, which they held up in Rockland County, getting away with $1.6 million.

During the robbery, terrorist gunmen killed Brink's security guard Peter Paige before transferring the money to a U-Haul truck a mile away, where a 38-year-old Boudin sat in the cabin.

The truck was stopped by police at a roadblock, where Boudin — unarmed — immediately surrendered. Gunmen in the back of the truck popped outside and began firing on the officers, killing two Long Island policemen —Sgt. Edward O'Grady and Officer Waverly Brown.

In 1984, Boudin pleaded guilty to first-degree robbery and second-degree murder in the death of security guard Peter Paige.

After her release from prison in 2003, she was hired by Columbia School of Social Work Associate as an adjunct professor in 2008. She was hired as a full-time professor in 2013, lecturing about issues facing convicts and their families when a person is released from prison.

The Soros funded San Francisco District Attorney Chesa Boudin is Boudin's son, who in 2021 successfully lobbied former New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo to commute the sentence of his father, David Gilbert — who was also a member of the Weather Underground who was imprisoned for his role in the robbery and murders.

Gilbert, who served as a getaway driver, was serving a sentence of 75 years to life in prison with no possibility of parole until 2056. Gilbert is among the last surviving people involved in the robbery.

Judith Clark, another former Weather Underground member, served 35 years of a 75-years-to-life sentence for her role in the robbery in suburban Rockland County before her sentence was commuted by Cuomo in 2016. She was paroled in 2019.

Ironically given of all the news coverage of Boudin's death their is not one mention of the former Weather Underground leaders, Bill Ayres or his wife, Bernardine Dohrn. Nor is it reported that in addition to their two children they shared legal guardianship of Chesa Boudin, son of Kathy Boudin and David Gilbert.

Yet, Leonard Peltier, who was framed by the FBI for protecting his people remains in prison.

HOSTED BY: NATIVE AMERICAN STUDENT PROGRAMS,
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, RIVERSIDE

SUPPORTED BY: SAN MANUEL BAND OF MISSION INDIANS & GRAY FAMILY TRUST

This exciting 8 day program is designed to give American Indian middle and high school students an opportunity to gain academic experience in a university setting at the University of California, Riverside. During the day, students will participate in various college courses, and personal development workshops. In the afternoons, they will engage in cultural and team building workshops, as well as fitness activities and a beach field trip. In addition, students will work with professors, college students, and invited American Indian community members as they discover and develop their career/lifetime goals. The program will end with a closing ceremony with certificates and awards. All students in the program will be available to UCR staff and students throughout their remaining years of high school, which will include guidance in choosing their coursework, financial aid, and applying to a university.

Don't miss out... The Summer Program will cover most of your expenses during the week. These include: housing, daily meals, course books, school supplies, and transportation during program activities. (Note: Participants are responsible for transportation to and from UCR at the beginning and end of the program. The program will not cover transportation costs, but will provide pick up arrangements for participants who arrive via bus, train, airplane etc. All travel arrangements must be made by the parent/guardian.

Participants must satisfy the following criteria:

- • Have the desire to contribute to the American Indian community.
- • Plan to enroll in an institution of higher education.
- • Be a currently enrolled 8th -11th grade student (entering 9th, 10th, 11th, or 12th grade in Fall 2022).
- • Complete entire application.
- • Upon acceptance, must provide a Negative COVID-19 test prior to attending the program.

FAMOUS AMERICAN INDIAN BALLERINA BRONZE STATUE SOLD FOR SCRAP METAL

Source: KOCP News. Tulsa, Oklahoma

A bronze statue depicting one of Oklahoma's most famous American Indian ballerinas, Marjorie Tallchief was cut from its base outside a Tulsa museum and sold for scrap to a recycling company, authorities said. .

Museum officials say the Five Moons statue of Marjorie Tallchief was likely removed from its plinth outside the Tulsa Historical Society, the Tulsa World reported. Museum officials received a call Monday from CMC Recycling in southwest Rogers County to identify what was believed to be pieces of the bronze statue, the newspaper reported.

"The Tulsa Police Department is working diligently to apprehend the thief," the historical society said in a statement.

Place said the original mold for the statue burned in a foundry fire, so recreating the statute will be much more complicated. The statues were created by Tulsa-area artists Monte England and Gary Henson. England worked on two of the pieces before his death in 2005, and Henson completed the project.

The other Five Moons statues of renowned American Indian ballerinas depict Yvonne Chouteau, Rosella Hightower, Moscelyne Larkin and Maria Tallchief, Marjorie Tallchief's sister.

A GoFundMe page has been set up to raise money for a replacement. The insurance deductible to replace the statue will cost $10,000, and the Tulsa Historical Society says they will need to raise an additional $5,000 for security.
